Federal Depository Libraries:

Your Source for the Toxic Release Inventory

INTRODUCTION

In 1986, Congress passed the Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act (EPCRA), also known as Title III of the Superfund Amendments Act of 1986. It established requirements concerning emergency planning and reporting of hazardous chemicals, and builds on numerous federal, state, and local programs aimed at helping communities to better meet their responsibilities in regard to potential chemical emergencies. The community right-to-know provisions have helped increase the public's knowledge and access to information on the presence of hazardous chemicals in their communities and releases of these chemicals into the environment.

Section 313 of the Emergency Planning and Right-to-Know Act requires EPA to establish an inventory of routine toxic chemical emissions from certain facilities. Facilities subject to this reporting requirement must submit this information to EPA and designated state agencies by July 1st of each year. From this information, EPA produces a data base called the Toxic Release Inventory (TRI).

To fulfill its mandate to provide broad citizen access to this important data, EPA publishes the Toxic Release Inventory every year. The entire file is released in a variety of traditional (printed) and electronic formats to meet the needs of the diverse community of potential users.

This directory lists Federal depository libraries that are ready to assist you in locating and using the TRI. In cooperation with the U.S. Government Printing Office, each of these libraries received the TRI in CD-ROM or microfiche format. The CD-ROM contains Hazardous Material Fact Sheets describing TRI chemicals, in addition to TRI data for the entire country. In all, 557 depository libraries (marked with double asterisks "") received the CD-ROM, and 694 depositories received microfiche sets for some or all states. (CD-ROM, which stands for Compact Disc - Read Only Memory, allows electronic data base searching using a personal computer.)

If you are unable to visit a Federal depository library, contact your local library for assistance. They may have the TRI, or they may be able to borrow it on interlibrary loan from a depository library. Some libraries will conduct online searches of the TRI data base on the National Library of Medicine's TOXNET system (which contains the most up-to-date information), usually for a fee. As policies vary from one library to another, it is best to contact your library directly for more information.

For more information about the Emergency Planning and Right-to-Know Act, you may also contact the Title III Information Hotline by calling (toll-free) 800-535-0202 (202-479-2449 in Washington, DC and Alaska). The hotline's hours are 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. EST, Monday through Friday (except federal holidays).
