1. INTRODUCTION

The primary objective of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) efforts to address the indoor radon problem is to reduce radon levels in buildings throughout the country. Achieving this objective requires a nationwide supply of capable radon mitigation contractors. In the Indoor Radon Abatement Act of 1988, Congress authorized EPA to establish a program to evaluate radon mitigation contractors and to provide this information to the public in cooperation with the States.

The Radon Contractor Proficiency (RCP) Program was developed to assist States, EPA Regions, local government officials, and the public in selecting contractors who have demonstrated their proficiency in reducing indoor radon levels. This program is managed by the EPA Office of Radiation Programs' Radon Division. Under this voluntary program, radon contractors demonstrate their proficiency by meeting specific Program requirements. Individual contractors who meet these requirements are then listed in periodic RCP Proficiency Reports.

2. LISTING IN THE PROFICIENCY REPORT - WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

This report lists those individual contractors who have met the requirements of the RCP Program as of December 15, 1990. These requirements are designed to provide minimum proficiency criteria for individuals who design and supervise the installation of radon mitigation systems in buildings. (Some States have more stringent requirements as part of their radon certification programs. The States should be consulted directly for details on their programs; see Section 5 for a list of State radon contacts).

The RCP Program measures the proficiency of an individual contractor, not their company. Therefore, users of this report who select a mitigation firm should ensure that the services are provided by the listed contractor.

The National RCP Program does not accredit mitigation contractors, nor does it certify, recommend, or endorse participating companies. Only the listed contractor, not their company of affiliation, are deemed proficient. The inclusion of a contractor in this report should not be interpreted as a certification or accreditation of the individual or affiliated company.

States and the public are advised to use only those contractors who are currently listed and continue to meet all of the program's requirements as outlined in Section 3. A proficient mitigator can be identified by their RCP photo identification card. A sample of this card is shown in Exhibit 1. The RCP identification number can be used to verify a contractor's current status in the program, or to report any problems or deficiencies to the State contacts listed in Section 5. For the purposes of this report, all ID cards will expire on July 1, 1991. Currently listed contractors who fail to meet the program's requirements as of July 1, 1991 will not be issued updated cards. When using listed mitigation contractors, consumers should verify that the contractor has kept his/her proficiency status current by checking the expiration date on the contractor's RCP identification card. The Proficiency Report will be updated periodically.

 USEPA Radon Contractor Proficiency Program
	EXPIRATION DATE
	Name: _____ I.D. #: _____ The identified individual has completed the requirements for listing under the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Radon Contractor Proficiency (RCP) Program. This person is not an employee of, nor do they represent, the Federal Government.

The EPA Radon Contractor Proficiency (RCP) Program evaluates the proficiency of radon mitigation contractors. This voluntary program does not accredit, certify, recommend, or endorse listed contractors, nor is it responsible for work done, or liability incurred by the contractor. Contractors must pass a written examination, keep records on mitigation work, adhere to mitigation guidelines, complete continuing education requirements, pass a reexamination every two years and maintain a current listing on the RCP National Radon Contractor Proficiency List. To verify current listing or to report problems, please call your State Department of Health or Environmental Protection.

3. PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

The RCP is a voluntary program, consisting of several elements which collectively help to ensure the proficiency of radon mitigation contractors. In order to demonstrate proficiency and be listed in the Proficiency Report, contractors must fulfill certain requirements:

- Training - contractors must attain a minimum level of radon knowledge, either through coursework, on-the-job training, or work experience. Recommended training is available through EPA Regional Radon Training Centers (listed in the Preface) and other training providers.
- National Exam - a contractor's knowledge of the major areas (domains) of mitigation practice is evaluated through a comprehensive written national exam (see Exhibit 2). There are six exam domains:
 - Evaluation
 - Diagnosis
 - Selection Strategy
 - Implementation Strategy
 - System Evaluation
 - Ethics
- Record Keeping and Inspection - the contractor must maintain records on the mitigation systems he or she has installed.
- Mitigation Guidelines - the contractor must adhere to minimum performance guidelines. The public may wish to use these guidelines as a basis for comparing service bids by contractors. The guidelines are presented in Section 4.
- Continuing Education - the contractor must complete requirements for ongoing training and professional development in order to remain informed and to expand their knowledge.
- Biennial Re-exam - the contractor will be evaluated by written examination every two years on their knowledge of changes in technology, regulations, protocols, and other radon subjects. Updated ID cards will be issued to contractors upon passage of the re-examination.

DESCRIPTION OF EXAM DOMAINS

1. Evaluate

Review the radon measurement history by evaluating past test results in order to determine if there is need for further action.

2. Diagnose

Identify the radon entry routes by visually inspecting the structure and by using diagnostic tests. This information can be used for designing a mitigation system or for troubleshooting system failures.

3. Selection Strategy

Select a mitigation strategy by reviewing relevant data and by considering the client's requirements, industry standards and practices, and mitigation alternatives (along with their relative costs and benefits), in order to reduce radon levels.

Develop a detailed mitigation design (including the type, size, and location of the system, and any necessary equipment) within the constraints of the building's construction, building codes, and other relevant factors that could affect the system's performance.

4. Implementation Strategy

Implement the mitigation system design by correctly installing the equipment and by making structural alterations and/or repairs as necessary in order to reduce radon levels.

5. System Evaluation

Check the operation of the system by performing appropriate tests. Arrange for proper system maintenance and follow-up by educating the client to ensure continued system functioning and effectiveness.

6. Ethics

Adhere to the highest standards of business and ethical practice and respect the privacy rights of clients.

4. RCP MITIGATION GUIDELINES¹

This section outlines the basic minimum performance guidelines for contractors and consultants involved in the reduction of radon in buildings. State and local regulatory agencies may choose to expand and use these guidelines in assessing the performance of professionals involved in radon mitigation. Agreement to follow these guidelines, along with successful completion of the RCP exam constitute the prerequisites for inclusion in the RCP Proficiency Report. Continued adherence to these guidelines and completion of the continuing education requirements will maintain a proficient status for the participants. The mitigator is not required to retrofit work performed prior to the date of initial publication of the Proficiency Report to comply with these guidelines.

Initial Client Interview - Radon Measurements

Mitigators should review and assess the quality of any previous radon measurements made by the client and determine whether these measurements were made in accordance with EPA "Indoor Radon and Radon Decay Product Measurement Protocols" (EPA 520-1/89-009) or "Radon Measurements in Schools - An Interim Report" (EPA 520/1-89-010). Should a determination be made that these protocols were not followed, resulting in potentially erroneous measurements, the client should be advised and retesting should be recommended.

Interpretation and Response to Measurements

Mitigators should be familiar with "A Citizens Guide to Radon" (OPA-86-004) and EPA/Ad Council consumer publications. These brochures should be used along with other EPA radon publications in advising clients on the appropriate response to the measurements taken. Mitigators should advise the client regarding limitations of screening measurements and recommend further confirmatory measurements when deemed necessary.

Building Investigation/Diagnostics

As a minimum, building investigations and/or building plan reviews (when available) should be conducted to determine potential radon entry routes and establish the appropriate mitigation strategy. Further diagnostic testing may be necessary if previous testing and building investigations do not provide adequate information to ascertain radon entry routes and provide an appropriate radon reduction strategy. Examples of diagnostic techniques include sub-slab permeability and communication tests, pressure differential measurements, radon/radon progeny measurements, and blower door testing.

Supplemental Design Criteria

A radon reduction system should be designed as an integral part of a building. It should be designed so that it does not create additional environmental, health, or safety hazards to the occupants or compromise the integrity and comfort of the building environment. Installation, operation, and maintenance costs should also be considered in the design criteria.

¹. This section is reproduced from the Radon Contractor Proficiency Program Radon Mitigation Guidelines, October 1989.

Temporary Risk Reduction Measures

Where temporary risk reduction measures have been taken, the mitigator should make sure that the client is aware of the temporary nature of these measures. Examples of temporary measures include maintenance of open window conditions, forced introduction of unconditioned air into the building, and closure of normally accessible areas of the building. Temporary equipment should be labeled as such, including on the label a contact name, phone number, and the installation date.

Bid and Contractual Considerations

Clear representation of the work to be provided should be given to the client. This should include a system design (where applicable), information on the system's effects on the building environment, services to be provided, operation and maintenance requirements, costs, clear definition of guaranties/warranties provided (if any), responsibilities of both client and mitigator, and means of dispute resolution.

Mitigation System Installation

Mitigators should follow State and local codes, standards, and practices. Examples of these include proper contractor licensing, use of building permits, and appropriate insurance coverage.

- Safety - Mitigators are recommended to follow applicable general construction safety practices (Occupational Safety and Health Administration - OSHA - Standards 29 CFR 1926). Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDSs) should be available to both workers and clients at their request. Working areas should be ventilated prior to and during any mitigation work.
- Indicators of Proper System Operation - Provisions should be made to provide the client with methods to detect system failure. Examples of these are lights, pressure and alarm devices, continuous radon monitors, and visual tests with documented procedures.
- System Labeling - Mitigation systems should be labeled to identify their function and proper operation. Labels should be legible from a distance, placed in prominent locations, and include a system description, a contact name, and phone number.

Mitigators should follow specific technical guidance provided in "Radon Reduction Techniques for Detached Houses - Technical Guidance" (EPA/625/5-87/019), "Application of Radon Reduction Methods" (EPA/625/5-88/024), "Radon-Resistant Residential New Construction" (EPA/600/8-88/087), and "Radon Reduction Techniques in Schools - Interim Technical Guidance" (EPA 520/1-89-020).

Post Mitigation Testing

System performance should be evaluated through quality control tests after installation. Radon measurements should be conducted following EPA measurement protocols.

- Short Term Tests - Tests to determine the proper operation of the mechanics of the system, and radon screening measurements to provide an initial measure of the effectiveness of the system in reducing radon levels in the building should be conducted.
- Long Term Tests - Long term testing should be recommended to the client to determine annual radon levels in normal living conditions and confirm the effectiveness of the system.

Project Documentation

Mitigators should maintain records concerning the individual mitigation systems installed. As a minimum, records should include radon measurements before and after mitigation work, dates of measurements, types of testing devices used, company or individual conducting the measurements, zip code of the measurement site, type of mitigation system and installation plan, and date of installation.

Operation and maintenance information should be provided to the client. This information should include a description of the principles by which the system operates, a description of the system installation and operation, routine maintenance requirements, proper system operation indicators, guarantees/warranties, service agreements, service contact, State and/or local health department contacts, and trouble-shooting guidelines for system failures. A recommendation should be made to the client that this information remains with the property for use by future owners.

Worker Safety

Mitigators should develop a worker safety and training program. Employees involved in diagnostics and installation of radon reduction systems should be monitored to determine exposures and records should be kept for each employee. There are no occupational exposure levels at this time for radon mitigators. The standard for uranium mine workers is currently 4 WLM per year, with a concentration limit of 1 WL (DOL/MSHA 30 CFR Part 57). This standard is significantly higher than the current EPA action level of 4 pCi/L and precautions should be taken to maintain exposure levels as low as possible. Actions, such as ventilation of workplace prior to any work, should be taken to reduce both short and long term exposures. When effective emergency controls (i.e., appropriate ventilation) in the workplace are not feasible, applicable respiratory protection following OSHA regulations (29 CFR 1910.134) is recommended.

6. How To Use The RCP Tables

This report lists proficient radon contractors in two tables, each of which provides the name, company name, address, telephone number, and geographic service area of the 1,123 contractors in the Proficiency Report.

Table 1 is an alphabetical list of all contractors, indexed by last name. Table 2 is an alphabetical list of all contractors, indexed by last name and by the State(s) in which they provide services; contractors who stated in their RCP application that they provide services nationwide are listed at the end of the table. Consumers who want a complete list of all contractors providing services in their State should consult both the State listing and the nationwide listing in Table 2. State radon contacts (see Section 5) can be consulted directly for periodic updates to the listings in these tables.

Note: If a State is not listed in Table 2, then there are no proficient contractors living in that State and no contractors explicitly listed that State as within their service area. Persons in these States who are seeking a proficient contractor should consult a contractor who provides services nationwide.

The abbreviations used in the tables for States, U.S. Territories, and Canada follow the standard two-letter postal format:
