FOREWORD

In most states, as well as at the federal level, indoor air quality issues are dealt with by a variety of agencies with the authority or expertise to focus on a particular problem or set of problems. Even in states that have a centralized indoor air program, responsibility for many indoor air issues may be dispersed among several different state agencies. As a result, finding the appropriate state contact is often a frustrating experience. This directory is intended to make it easier to find the right contact.

The 1991 edition of Directory of State Indoor Air Contacts was produced by the Public Health Foundation, in cooperation with the United States Environmental Protection Agency. The Foundation was established by the Association of State and Territorial Health Officials to conduct research and provide support to state health agencies.

We would like to thank the state personnel who took time to verify the information contained in the directory. In addition, substantial assistance was provided by:

Ms. Betsy Agle - U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Office of Air and Radiation;
Mr. Bob Axelrad - U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Office of Air and Radiation;
Mr. William Becker - State and Territorial Air Pollution Program Administrators and Association of Local Air Pollution Control Officials;
Mr. Frank Bishop - National Association of State Energy Officials;
Mr. Terry Devine - Conference of Radiation Control Program Directors;
Mr. Frank Giles - Consumer Product Safety Commission;
Dr. Rochelle Mayer - National Center for Education in Maternal and Child Health;
Ms. Marla McIntyre - National Conference of States on Building Codes and Standards;
Mr. G. Wade Miller - Association of State Drinking Water Administrators;
Ms. Joy Silver - Association of State and Territorial Health Officials and National Network of State Tobacco Prevention and Control Contacts; and
Ms. Arty Williams - U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Office of Pesticide Programs, and Association of American Pesticide Control Officials.

We hope you find the directory useful. Please forward questions or comments to: Indoor Air Division, Environmental Protection Agency, 401 M Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20460.

INTRODUCTION

The Directory of State Indoor Air Contacts is a guide to locating individuals who can provide information and assistance on indoor air quality problems. It brings together information on more than 17 issues, from asbestos to wood preservatives, for the range of agencies involved in addressing those issues, from health agencies to energy departments. Additional categories will be included in the directory as substances are recognized as air pollution problems. A new category for the 1991 edition is Lead (In Paint).

The information is organized alphabetically by state. For each state, the directory lists the various agencies and their divisions, followed by a listing of individual contact names and telephone numbers organized by type of indoor air pollutant or problem. Since agencies often have individuals from different divisions working on indoor air quality issues, we have listed the division with the contact name to clarify which divisions may be associated with particular issues. Agencies or divisions with primary responsibility for a particular area are marked with an asterisk; otherwise, the order in which agencies, divisions, and contacts are listed is without implication regarding degree of authority.

In general, the contacts listed in this directory are able to provide useful information and appropriate referrals. However, programs and resources devoted to indoor air-related issues vary significantly among states. Frequently, individuals may call government agencies to find out if their homes or workplaces can be inspected for potential indoor air problems. Some state and local agencies conduct on-site inspections; many do not. Even in agencies that conduct inspections, there are often limitations on the types of buildings they inspect (i.e., some will only go into homes) and the types of problems they respond to (i.e., some will inspect only problems that appear to be from combustion sources or that appear to endanger life). Telephone consultations with state or local personnel to describe problems and to identify potential solutions can often take the place of on-site visits.
