What is the Environmental Financing Information Network?

The Environmental Financing Information Network (EFIN), one component of the EPA's Center for Environmental Finance, is a web-based collection of environmental finance resources. EFIN can be accessed through the Environmental Finance website or the contact information provided on the left.

What type of services does EFIN provide?

EFIN provides environmental finance information and referrals to public and private organizations and distributes publications for the EPA's Center for Environmental Finance, the Environmental Financial Advisory Board, and the Environmental Finance Center Network. EFIN distributes information and responds to inquiries through:

- The Environmental Finance Website
A comprehensive website of environmental finance reports, case studies, and financial tools, available to the public. The Financial Tools and Funding Sources webpage provides links to funding resources within and outside of EPA.
- Guides to Financial Tools
This series of guidebooks covers a wide range of topics and approaches that assist public and private sector parties in identifying the most appropriate ways to finance their environmental protection needs. These guidebooks can be found on our Environmental Finance Publications and Reports webpage.
- Infoline
An information phone line that provides callers with referrals on environmental funding needs, as well as assistance accessing and searching the Environmental Finance website.
