Re: Court Ordered Point-of-Sale Warnings for Certain Pesticide Products

Dear Retail Establishment Manager:

A U.S. District Court has instructed the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to notify you and other retail establishments of its order directing the distribution of a point-of-sale warning for certain pesticide products that are sold in urban areas inhabited by threatened and endangered Pacific salmon and steelhead. The October 17, 2005, order of Judge John C. Coughenour specifically provides that EPA is to:

[N]otify retail establishments in [those] Urban Areas . . . , by mail, of the . . . mandatory point of sale notification requirements whenever products containing the Urban Pesticides are sold.

In compliance with that order, enclosed are copies of the point-of-sale warning that the Court ordered be distributed whenever products are sold containing any of the following seven pesticide active ingredients: 2,4-D, Carbaryl, Diazinon, Diuron, Malathion, Triclopyr BEE, and Trifluralin. A list of "common" pesticide products that contain these ingredients is enclosed. Because there may be additional products sold in your area that are not included in the enclosed lists but contain one or more of these seven active ingredients, please check the ingredient statement on product labels to ensure that warnings are distributed for all products containing these ingredients. Also enclosed is a list of communities in which the warnings are to be distributed by retail establishments.

The Court instructed EPA that the heading and text of the notice must be highly visible to purchasers. Accordingly, we ask that you display the warnings in your establishment(s) in a manner that will be highly visible to persons who might purchase these products. Placing the warnings as shelf tags with the affected products is one means by which this could be accomplished.

Additional information regarding the point-of-sale notification, including a printable PDF version of the notice itself, can be found on EPA's Web site at:

Thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

Sincerely,
