Electronic Mail Directory

Electronic Mail is a computer-based message system which allows the exchange of "Messages" through a central "Electronic Mailbox." Communicating word processors, data terminals, personal or office computers, and other types of standard office automation equipment may be used to send "Messages."

The EPA Electronic Mail service provides virtually instantaneous transmission of textual information between persons and organizations throughout the Agency, regardless of location or time of transmission.

Facsimile Directory

Many headquarters and field locations have been furnished with high speed facsimile equipment. Priority letters, drawings, charts, forms, and photographs are particularly appropriate for facsimile communications. For best results, use only black ink on white paper. Please limit transmission to 20 pages or less except in emergency situations.
