What Are the Industry Sector Notebooks?

This series from the U.S. EPA provides information of general interest regarding industry-specific manufacturing processes and pollution issues associated with specific industrial sectors. The series is unique in taking a holistic, "whole facility" approach to environmental information, instead of separating information related to pollutants of air, water, and land. For each industry the Notebook contains:

- information about size, geographic distribution, products, and economic trends.
- a description of manufacturing processes, including inputs of raw materials and pollution outputs.
- a profile of chemical releases to the environment.
- a summary of federal environmental regulations and compliance history.
- pollution prevention opportunities.
- government and industry initiatives for compliance assurance.
- resource materials and contacts.

The Industry Sector Notebooks are published by the Office of Compliance, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), and have been thoroughly reviewed by EPA and outside experts. The Notebooks have all been carefully researched and referenced, and include many tables and figures containing quantitative information relevant to each industry. The Notebooks are one of the few sources of consolidated data about an industry. Pollutant emission and compliance data from the 1995 Notebooks has been revised in the Sector Notebook Data Refresh—1997 (see Ordering Information).

What Do Users of the Notebooks Say?

Since 1995, more than 300,000 Notebooks have been distributed, in hard copy and electronic form. Users have praised the Notebooks generously. Some of their comments follow:

"My company does regulatory compliance audits . . . and we use the Notebooks as background when we are unfamiliar with particular industries. I really liked the process descriptions and chemical release information. I think the project is wonderful."

—Environmental consultant

"I read through the printing Notebook twice. I find it to be a good all-around reference and a good background document. It gave me some good ideas on how to improve operations."

—Printing industry commenter

"The Sector Notebooks are a wonderful addition to our regional library."

—EPA Region 9 Librarian

"First let me say that the Notebooks are outstanding—first rate. . . . We use the Notebooks in a course on industrial ecology to teach students about the environmental impacts of general industrial processes."

—Professor, Yale University School of Forestry and Environmental Studies

"The Notebooks were very instructive regarding the relationship between regulatory requirements and industry technologies."

—Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, Environment Directorate, France

"The Notebooks give me a real-world feel for the environmental issues and technology choices that industries face."

—Professor, Clark University
