

Environmental Resources Directory

1989

"First, controlling pollution is not enough. Pollution must be prevented from occurring in the first place.

We will make pollution prevention a hallmark of our environmental efforts. The people of this country are, I believe, ready to participate in this effort. It is an area that demands education more than regulation, and information more than enforcement."

William K. Reilly, Administrator
U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Youth Environmental Education Resources

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is frequently asked for environmental and conservation information to assist youth groups, schools, and others.

Government resources are limited so we have gathered information from businesses, industries, utilities, public interest groups, and others who may have environmental/conservation programs and information materials. We share this information with those who may have an interest in environmental education resources.

This Directory does not contain all the environmental educational resources available from private and public entities but is intended as a start in identifying such resources. The Directory may also suggest ideas for resources not listed but available in your communities and is a supplement to materials available in schools and libraries.

Youth groups and classes interested in participating in the Presidential Environmental Youth Awards program may obtain information and applications from our office.

The last page of the Directory may be used for your additions and suggestions for future use.

Thank you for the fine response that earlier editions of the Directory received. We hope the 1989 edition is also helpful in suggesting sources of assistance for environmental education.

The Washington State Legislature and the State Board of Education specify that the environment be included as a topic of instruction in the public school curriculum. A comprehensive document, Environmental Education Guidelines for Washington Schools, has been developed by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to form the framework for an extensive environmental education in all public schools. The guidelines cover a variety of subjects with special emphasis on the environment. They provide teachers with suggestions for educating young people, grades K-12, about the environment. In addition, the State Department of Ecology has initiated a school program called, A-Way with Waste, to educate students on waste management and recycling issues.
