ENVIRONMENTAL DIRECTORY
of
EPA Regional Offices
State Pollution Control Agencies
Citizen Environmental Organizations

FOREWORD

This directory has been prepared as a reference for Federal, State, and local officials and others interested in environmental quality. It includes listings of the EPA regional system, primary State environmental offices, and citizen conservation and environmental organizations within the Mid-Atlantic Region.

This directory will be updated from time to time. Suggestions as to how it may be improved, information which should be added or deleted, or additional listings are welcome.

THE ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY AND REGION III

The U. S. Environmental Protection Agency has ten regional offices across the country, allowing close cooperation with State and local agencies and maximum participation by the public in its programs to improve the quality of the environment.

The regional offices have strong administrators who exercise broad discretion and decisionmaking authority, rather than simply shuffling papers back and forth to Washington.

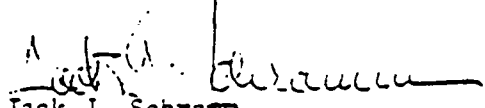

This means that the public can play a meaningful part in EPA programs without having to reach some remote official in Washington. And it means that the administration of Federal pollution laws can be coordinated and tailored to fit the unique local conditions within each Region.

Region III comprises the States of Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia, plus the District of Columbia. It is home to about 25 million people, 70 percent of whom live in metropolitan areas.

The Region ranks third in manufacturing and second in mineral production; first if petroleum is excluded. A large share of the Nation's oil imports—as well as substantial domestic shipments—move through the Chesapeake and Delaware estuaries.

These factors create some special environmental problems for the Region. Many of its problems, however, are common with those of other areas of the United States. Progress has been made, but waterways are still being polluted by municipal and industrial wastes; air pollution still haunts metropolitan areas; sewage treatment lags far behind population growth; solid waste disposal becomes ever more difficult as the long range goal—resource recovery—continues to prove economically elusive; improved technology reveals toxic substances and other hazardous materials in previously undetected sites; and the quality of drinking water is suspect in some areas.

These concerns of the Environmental Protection Agency are shared by many, including the agencies and organizations listed in this Environmental Directory.

C O N T E N T S

The Environmental Protection Agency's immediate partners in the fight to improve the environment are the State agencies charged with various aspects of environmental protection and pollution control. These agencies are listed, for each State respectively, under the heading STATE ENVIRONMENTAL AND POLLUTION CONTROL AGENCIES, and include air pollution, water pollution, noise pollution, drinking water, solid waste, pesticides, radiation, soil conservation, forestry, fish, game, environmental health, state parks and State geology.

Conservation organizations have long been active in the effort to prevent deterioration of the Nation's resources and improve the quality of the environment. These are headed CITIZEN ENVIRONMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS AND are listed alphabetically for each State.

DEFINITIONS

Environmental	Those persons having broad authority for the overall supervision of State environmental programs.
Water Quality	Those persons who are, in general, responsible for such State programs as water quality surveillance and enforcement, training, and certification of sewage treatment plant operators, pollution control studies, as well as planning and administering the programs authorized by the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, including establishment of priorities, review of grant applications, plans and specifications and other related activities.
Water Supply	Those persons who are responsible for the drinking water program of the State.
Industrial Waste	Those persons who are leaders in the conduct of the permitting program for industrial discharges, providing technical and advisory assistance to industries and conducting studies relative to the development of industrial effluent standards, and serve as the focal point for technology transfer from EPA of new industrial waste treatment processes.
Air Quality	Those persons who are responsible for review and approval of requests for the construction or modification of air pollution control facilities, development and revision of implementation plans, provide technical assistance, maintain air quality monitoring and surveillance programs and carry out enforcement of air quality standards.
Solid Waste	Those persons who are, in general, responsible for the conduct of surveys of solid waste disposal practices and problems. They also develop solid waste management and disposal plans and approve solid waste disposal projects, as provided for under individual State codes or laws.
Noise	Those persons responsible for the noise pollution control programs of the State.
Pesticides	Those persons responsible for the pesticide control programs of the State.
Radiation	Those persons responsible for radiation control programs of the State.
Hazardous Waste	Those persons who are, in general, responsible for key activities involved in the comprehensive management of hazardous wastes.
Laboratory	Those persons responsible for laboratory operations connected with the environmental protection programs of the State. (Split responsibility is qualified in the listing, e.g. separate water supply laboratory.)
