National environmental laws require close coordination and cooperation between states and the federal government in setting environmental standards, planning environmental programs as well as enforcing environmental laws and regulations. Region 10 U. S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is unique in having satellite EPA operations officers located with state agencies to facilitate state-federal requirements and provide information to the public.

Region 10 includes Alaska, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

Information on State agencies is included on the following pages.

Environmental Information

---

You have an environmental concern or emergency and don't know what to do? LOOK IN YOUR TELEPHONE BOOK! Consult your telephone book (under the name of your city or county) for the local agency/office responsible for environmental concerns. Many cities have a citizens' complaint bureau or ombudsman who will give you assistance or direct you to the right place. You may also wish to contact your local county council or county commissioners, mayor or members of the city council.

States and local governments may have environmental requirements more stringent or covering more issues than the federal laws (i.e., many cities have local noise ordinances that are more restrictive than federal law).

Environmental Emergencies

Fire departments should be notified of any hazardous spill or accident. Many fire departments have staff trained in identifying and handling toxic/hazardous materials. Fire departments are usually closer to the scene than any agency would be and therefore able to respond quickly and notify the other appropriate authorities.

The U. S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) also has an emergency response telephone number (206-442-1263) which is a 24-hour number for reporting oil spills, hazardous material spills, etc. In reporting or requesting assistance, clearly give your name, address, telephone number, location of the spill/hazard, and probable source of the material. Providing as much information as possible assists in a prompt response.

Other Environmental Information

Public libraries as well as school and university libraries are excellent sources of environmental information. The U. S. EPA Regional Library, 1200 Sixth Avenue, M/S 541, Seattle, Washington 98101, can provide assistance on technical publications, bibliographies, etc. A limited number of EPA brochures are also available.

EPA films are available through:

Film Distribution Center
1028 Industrial Drive
Seattle, Washington 98188

Freedom of Information Act Office:

FOIA Officer
U. S. Environmental Protection Agency
1200 Sixth Avenue, M/S 635
Seattle, Washington 98101

The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA): Copies of government documents may be requested through the FOIA process. The written request should clearly identify the document, location of document if known, date of document, etc. Information on FOIA is available at the following address or by calling the FOIA Officer at (206) 442-4280.

Freedom of Information Act Officer
U. S. Environmental Protection Agency
1200 Sixth Avenue, M/S 635
Seattle, Washington 98101

Environmental FORUMS are held in the EPA Region 10 Seattle office usually on the third Thursday of each month. The public is invited and should check the schedule by telephoning (206) 442-4280.

Presidential Environmental Youth Award applications are available to schools, Scouts, Campfire, and other youth groups. The awards program encourages local environmental awareness for youth and their communities. Applications and information is available through telephone requests (206-442-4280) or by writing to the above address.

Federal Register provides a uniform system for making available to the public regulations and legal notices issued by federal agencies. Available by subscription or in many public libraries.

EPA's Small Business Ombudsman is available to help small businesses understand and comply with federal environmental regulations. Toll-free telephone 800-368-5888 (when telephoning, remember the three hour time difference in Washington, D. C. Atlantic Coast time is three hours earlier than Pacific Coast time).
