A RIBLIOGRAPHY FOR NATIVE AMERICAN STUDIES

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is offered in good faith that American Indian peoples possess their own unique visions of environmental justice which are capable of inaugurating an effective decolonization process. It is our intent to support and encourage native scholars and legal advocates in defense of, and on the offensive for. Mother Earth.

Included here are articles and opinions we believe in, and others that make us angry. We believe it is critical to know and study your opponent's strategies and tactics, and be prepared to answer them.

Although the information in this document was initially funded wholly or in part by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency under assistance agreement EQ998390-01 in 1996 to Jobs & Environment Campaign / Native-Ecology Initiative, it may not necessarily reflect the views of the Agency and no official endorsement should be inferred. Native Ecology Initiative has taken on the task of continuing to update this bibliography and make it available on an annual basis. The copy in your hands is the 1997 edition.

There are many people to thank, for many reasons, and we thank you:

- The Oglala Lakota Nation, its elders, its national government, its people and especially its remarkable and dedicated Natural Resources Regulatory Agency
- Jobs & Environment Campaign and its Chairman, Ralph Paige of the Federation of Southern Cooperatives, and its Executive Director, Carole Allen
- Laura J. Fitton, John Chloe, and Richard Regan, of the Center for Policy Alternatives, for an early Annotated Bibliography of Environmental Justice
- Dr. Benjamin Goldman, who provided access to his extensive files and shared clippings on environmental justice in Indian Country
- The Educational Foundation of America, for support of Native Ecology Initiative
- Lehua Lopez (Hawaiian), of the Native Lands Institute, who sent valuable information
- Al Gedicks, of the Center for Alternative Mining Development Policy, who sent valuable information
- Deldi Reves, of US EPA, for providing her bibliographic information
- Dr. Robert Bullard, of the Clark Atlanta Environmental Justice Resource Center, for help in networking and teaching about building partnerships
- Tom Goldtooth, of the Indigenous Environmental Network, for inspiration and helping us disseminate this bibliography to the grassroots
- Jerry Pardilla (Penobscot) and Mary Bowannie of the National Tribal Environmental Council, for helping us disseminate this bibliography to the tribes
- Pat Denham, Christine Lehnertz and Nancy Reish, EPA EJ Project Managers who were very supportive and always helpful
- Michael Meuser and Dr. Andrew Szasz of the University of California at Santa Cruz, for their "Environmental Inequality Bibliography" (available from EPA Region 8's Environmental Justice program)
- Karen Medville (Cherokee) for her work as an environmental toxicologist and current study of the effects of gestational lead exposure.
- Daniel Wildcat (Yuchi) for his insights on American Indian Education, and promoting dialogue between traditional American Indian Elders and American Indian scientists and engineers
- All native nations and peoples who fight for environmental justice, and all the writers, researchers and lawyers who work to assist them

Executive Order No. 12,898, Federal Actions to Address Environmental Justice in Minority Populations and Low-Income Populations, 59 Federal Register 7629 (1994) (2/11/94)

Federal Interagency Symposium, "Health Research and Needs to Ensure Environmental Justice". February, 1994. Participating sponsors were The National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS), the National Institute of Health - Office of Minority Health Research (NIH), the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, Centers for Disease Control, the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (ATSDR), the Department of Energy, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the National Center for Environmental Health, Centers for Disease Control. Participating were more than 1,000 people, including 400 representatives of impacted communities. There are written reports, an Executive Summary & Proceedings volume, and a volume of Recommendations. Note: Although the introduction to the Executive Summary & Proceedings indicates that Indigenous participants in the conference asked that their two breakout sessions not be recorded, the "Breakout Session" section on indigenous peoples erroneously indicates that "according to the tape record, no discussion was convened at this session." There are, however, Recommendations from an indigenous peoples' committee in the Recommendations volume.

Closing Note: In scanning this literature, I am left with many images from many fine writers. One that sticks is the result of Dean Suagee and Christopher Stearns' comment in one of the articles cited above:

"Although the Bourland Court suggests that the Cheyenne River Sioux consented to the taking of their lands for the Oahe dam and reservoir, 113 S.Ct., at 2313-2314, anyone who doubts that the tribes on whose reservations Pick-Sloan reservoirs were located were under duress should examine the photograph of George Gillette, the Tribal Chairman of the Three Affiliated Tribes of the Fort Berthold Reservation, who broke down in tears while signing the contract with the Army Corps of Engineers for the Garrison dam and reservoir. Reproduced in "Native American Testimony: A Chronicle of Indian-White Relations From Prophecy to the Present,

1492-1992, p. 343 (Peter Nabokov, ed., 1991)."

I didn't doubt, but I examined that photograph. It is an image that stays with you. Legal "consent" ought to be informed and truly voluntary.
